

Big Wheel, Raymond Lohr, designer, 1969

kid size: The Material World of Childhood is an exhibition of the Vitra Design Museum, Weil am Rhein, Germany.

Generous support for the exhibition's presentation in Pittsburgh has been provided by members of The Associates of Carnegie Museum of Art and The Henry L. Hillman Fund. Additional support has been provided by Eat'n Park Restaurants and Parkhurst Dining Services, and by The Aetna Foundation.

General support for the museum's exhibition program is provided by The Heinz Endowments, the Pennsylvania Council on the Arts, and Allegheny Regional Asset District.

See a show that's just your size

Tall or small, there's plenty to like about kid size: The Material World of Childhood on now in the Heinz Galleries. See over 300 years of objects designed by adults for children from around the world. It's a diverse assortment from cribs and chairs to strollers and cycles, all the things that make up a child's world. Plenty of hands-on activities will help both young and older participants think like designers while acting like kids.

Beginning May 10, Carnegie Museums of Art and Natural History are partnering with the Children's Museum of Pittsburgh to offer a special discount. Visit one, then show your Carnegie Museum tag or Children's Museum receipt at the partnering institution and receive $1 off admission.

Collection Spotlight

Chuck Close, Self-Portrait, 1999

Chuck Close is best known as a painter, but has often used photography as an intermediary process. His Photorealist paintings begin as tightly cropped photographs, then are transferred to a canvas using a Renaissance grid system, dividing up the canvas into a series of squares and then transcribing them one square at a time. This large photographic self-portrait underscores a central theme of his work--that the subjects of Close's works are not the individual sitters, but rather the dispassionately scrutinizing views of the camera lens itself. Self-portrait, a recent acquisition of Carnegie Museum of Art, can be seen in On Paper III, May 21 through October 9 in the Works on Paper Gallery.

Architectural Charette, a brainstorming design studio in conjunction with the exhibition Michael Maltzan: Alternate Ground

Tuesday-Friday beginning at 3:00 p.m.
Saturday beginning at 11:00 a.m.

Hall of Sculpture

Five teams of area students collaborate with professional architects to develop inventive architectural proposals for challenging urban sites. Watch the designs take shape through models and drawings and chat with the teams about their ideas.

Saturday at 3:00 p.m. Join the conversation as Michael Maltzan and a team of design professionals discuss the process and the projects. Refreshments and a book signing of Michael Maltzan: Alternate Ground, a catalogue of the current Heinz Architectural Center exhibition, follow.

Lunch & Learn Lecture

kid size: The Material World of Childhood

Thursday, May 19, 10:00 a.m.-2:00 p.m.

Elisabeth Agro, assistant curator of decorative arts, and Stephen Stadelmeier, associate professor and chair of the industrial design program at Carnegie Mellon University, examine how adults' views of childhood translate into the designs of objects made for kids. After lunch, they'll lead a studio workshop where participants can design their own original object for children.

$25 members; $30 nonmembers (lunch included)

Call 412.622.3288 to register.

Summer Camp Registration

Register now for summer camps beginning in June. Half-day and full-day, week long camps are available for ages 4-13, plus high school workshops and preschool play dates. Enroll in fun, creative art camps with themes such as Art Picnic and Expressive Drawing. New this year, Architecture Explorations, offers exciting architecture camps presented with the Carnegie Mellon School of Architecture with themes like Buildings and Bodies and Bridges.
